GUEST LECTURE

MOU - (4)

Today on 27/1/24, a workshop was organised by the department of English literature. This month's Guest lecturer "Dr (Garcho) Harpreet Kaur Garcho" Assistant Professor at Kamla Devi Rathi College. The topic was more about "An overview of history of English literature with special reference to Victorian age". The whole lecture was very didactic and informative. The lecturer briefed the students, from the age of Anglo-Saxons (450-1066 AD) to Post Modern age (1945 - till date). From the time of Beowulf to Sylvia Plath, the political, social and religious aspects which affect the literature was thoroughly imparted to the students. The feedbacks from the student proved the fact that the lecture was a resounding success.

Dr Gardha said that History is looking back at time. Old English is the language of the people in Anglo Saxon period. Dominance of language decided by the number of people speaking that language. Greek and Latin were the primary languages and not much literature was produced in English during the time. Then came

Middle Age or the Dark Age of English Literature

It was called Dark age as people were politically, socially and economically suppressed. It was a period of Peasant's Revolt and Black Death. Hence, not much could be written during the age. St.

Augustan brought Christianity to the nation. Bible was translated from Latin to the vernacular dialect during this age.

During this age Christianity was divided into Catholics and Protestants. After

Henry VIII, Mary - the eldest daughter Mary became the queen and then

Elizabeth came to throne. It marked the beginning of Renaissance. Literature flourished in this age. Milton helped restore the throne, so it was the age of restoration. Oxford university and Cambridge university came to existence in 13th century. Dictionary was composed in the period and the grammar rules were written in this age. French revolution and the Industrial revolution came in this age. She continued this journey of literature till post-modern age.
